

THE CHIMURENGA CHRONIC

A future-forward, pan African newspaper

BACKGROUND

In which ways do people live their lives with joy and creativity and beauty, sometimes amidst suffering and violence, and sometimes perpendicular to it?

How do people fashion routines and make sense of the world in the face of the temporariness or volatility that defines so many of the arrangements of social existence here?

These questions loom over a contemporary Africa. Yet most knowledge produced on the continent remains heavily reliant on simplistic and rigid categories, the bulk of it unable to capture the complexities and ambivalences that inflect so much of contemporary quotidian life here.

During 2011 Chimurenga produced a pilot issue of a fictional pan African newspaper. Titled, the Chimurenga Chronic, the project was published in collaboration with Nigeria's Cassava Republic Press and Kenya's Kwani Trust, and distributed across several African cities.

An intervention in both time and space, it embraced the newspaper as the medium best capable of inhabiting, reproducing and interpreting political, social and cultural life in places where uncertainty and turbulence, unpredictability and multidirectional shifts are the forms taken, in many instances, by daily experience.

Employing reportage, creative non-fiction, autobiography, satire and analysis to offer a detailed, vivid and richly textured engagement of everyday life, the Chronic told stories of a complicated ordinariness.

The success of the project was testimony to the enormous possibility. We do not lack the talent, the ingenuity or the voices to tell our own story. Nor do we lack the readership – Africa is hungry for intelligent and challenging writing that takes seriously the task of uncovering the stories that underpin our current condition. We have in place the networks of circulation to move ideas and distribute goods in innovative ways.

“Better than The New Yorker,”
Financial Times Magazine, London

“The Chronic is a cracker. The sort of newspaper you want to open at the end of every week.”
The Mail & Guardian, Johannesburg

FORWARD (THE NOW-NOW)

From March 2013, Chimurenga introduced the Chronic as an English-language quarterly pan African new paper (not merely a newspaper), that documents the way African societies invent ourselves in the present and embraces our capacity to continually produce something bold, beautiful and full of humour.

The Chronic is a publication borne out of an urgent need to write our world differently, to begin asking new questions, or even the old ones anew.

The Chronic is one small, deeply subjective attempt to do things differently. Ironically, we started with what we know, taking inspiration from the flexibility, readiness to take risks, and ability to manoeuvre through different temporal orders that defines life here.

We wrote, we got our friends and partners to write, draw and photograph, we edited, and we compiled. We sought out stories that articulate the complexity, the innovation, thinking and dreams – all the things that make life sustainable in this place. We favoured writing, art and photography that is open, plural, and inflected by the workings of power, innovation, creativity and resistance – yes, resistance.

We arrived at a gazette, a collaborative living document that seeks out our capacity to continually produce something bold, beautiful and full of humour. We titled it the Chronic, a nod to both the art of chronicling, of documenting historical events in real time (the time-zone we call 'now-now'), and because things are, well yes, chronic.

The success of this initiative is not how long it lives but that it lives fully, that it travels and inserts itself directly in our lives, takes its place and speaks to the place in which we live, love and work.

Produced locally,

the Chronic articulates the complexity, the innovation, thinking and dreams – all the things that make life sustainable in this place.

Distributed globally,

it seeks to write Africa in the present and into the world at large. In its pages, Africa is not described as an object apart from or on the periphery of the world, but as the place in which we live, love and work.

The Chronic consists of the following:

Broadsheet:

48-64 broadsheet pages of news, analysis and long-form journalism, excellent columns and more by award-winning writers, journalists and artists from around the world.

Online & Digital Platform:

The Chronic is published online monthly at www.chimurengachronic.co.za. These thematic online editions feature highlights and previews from the print edition, together with extra digital and multimedia features, that engage the internet's specific characteristics as a public forum and as a medium, one with its own evolving practices of reading and viewing, economies of attention, and modes of interaction.

The online Chronic aims to chart an expanded field of publication, drawing on the history of print culture while acting as a digital hub for the exploration of emerging forms and the public spaces constituted around them.

In addition, we made widespread use of social media and networks to both market the Chronic and engage readers, drawing on new communication tools to incorporate contributions from readers, tapping into social and online networks not just for eyewitness material but also to connect to original and unofficial expert sources.

The full print edition of the Chronic is also available in a digital edition, as a universally readable, interactive PDF.

CONTENT & PRODUCTION

Content

The Chronic features news, analysis and long-form journalism, innovative arts and culture stories, politics, columns and more by award-winning writers, journalists and artists from around the world.

Its content range from in-depth investigations into historical and contemporary issues such as post-colonial land reform, the re-invention of tribes, international relations, trans-boundary thanatology, to regular features on migration economics and innovative coverage of sports, arts, media, technology and more.

The stand-alone Chronic Books Magazine is a self-contained publication packed with interviews, analysis and reviews, as well as new fiction and poetry.

Themes

The Chronic aims to strengthen the international discourse on Africa by creating a public platform that brings together writers and readers from around the world.

Those who participate in the Chronic share an urgency to reveal the ways in which society is shaped and created by the confluence of historical events and individuals that are significant to a specific time and place, as well as a desire to create an imaginary place where new social orders and alternative histories can be realized. What is valuable about the specificities of a place and its stories becomes a basis for embracing, altering, and intervening with the conventions of the media to address larger global issues such as colonialism, war, daily life, the vernacular, and history.

Recurrent investigations in the Chronic include topics such as international relations, migration economics, locality, civil society, elections, democracy and gender—from different angles and through various perspectives, to present a complex view of the world.

Our aim is to challenge the traditional ways these topics are explored by creating a platform for writers, thinkers and artists who eschew banality, didacticism, political correctness, and easy answers and instead harness investigation, provocation, humor, beauty and transformative leaps of the imagination to talk about current critical political and social issues.

Each issue is focused around a series of central themes that capture the issues central to our lives, our conversations and imaginations.

Team

The editorial team of the Chronic comprises a gender-balanced mix consisting of leading editors from Africa and around the globe, including Ntone Edjabe (Cameroon/South Africa), Dominique Malaquais (France/USA), Achal Prabhala (India), Paula Akugizibwe (Rwanda), Rustum Kozain, Ingrid Masondo, Stacy Hardy, (South Africa), Bibi Bakare-Yusuf, Akin Adesokan (Nigeria), Göran Dahlberg (Sweden) and Billy Kahora (Kenya).

Working with a core staff based in Cape Town together with editorial hubs with our collaborative partners in Nairobi, Lagos, Kampala, Cairo, the Chronic brings together contributing writers and journalists, artists, designers and theorists throughout Africa and around the globe.

The Chronic features work by acclaimed writers such as Binyavanga Wainaina (Kenya), Adewale Maja-Pearce, Deji Teye, Yemisi Aribisala, Tolu Ogunlesi (Nigeria), Nana Darkoa Sekyiamah (Ghana), Vivek Narayanan (India), alongside award winning journalists including Simon Kuper, Jean-Christophe Servant, Parselelo Kantai, Kwanele Sosibo, Gwen Ansell and more.

The gazette also offers a platform for young emerging voices around the continent such as Dudumalingani Mqomboti, Lindokuhle Nkosi (South Africa), Tony Mochama (Kenya), Fungai Machirori, Bongani Kona (Zimbabwe) amongst others.

We have grown our contributor base through Chronic Sessions and workshops in cities around the world including meetings in Democratic Republic of Congo, Germany, Nigeria, the USA, the UK, Kenya, France, Senegal, United Arab Emirates, Vietnam, Mexico, Brazil and South Africa (Johannesburg).

In addition, we are partnering with existing publications and research institutes to share research and content.
